

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service. I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is decidedly unfair. Moreover, it represents an underhanded form of taxation.

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. Big business passes these costs on to their customer in any case. Little guys like me do not have the same resources. The burden on businesses is small, the burden on little guys like me is relatively large. I urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Sincerely,
